Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from The Poetical Works of Thomas Moore: Including Lalla Rookh, the Irish Melodies, National Airs, Sacred Songs, the Loves of the Angels, the Summer Fete, Ballads, Songs, Poems; Etc., With Copious Notes and Annotations, Including the Comments of Earl Russell, Lord Jeffrey, and Various Others, An Thomas Moore, whose name will ever be associated with the poetry and music of his country, was born on the 28th of May, 1779, at No. 12, Aungier Street, Dublin, where his father kept a small wine store. At a very early age he was sent to a school kept by a man named Malone, who seemed to possess, from Moore s own account of him, but little aptitude for teaching. When he was old enough it was determined that he should go to the best school in Dublin - the Grammar School of Samuel Whyte, who had been the early instructor of the celebrated Brinsley Sheridan There is little doubt but that Moore s genius first became developed under the fostering care of this master, who had warmly been devoted to the drama and those connected with it, throughout his life. Indeed, it was part of his occupation to prepare persons who intended the stage as their profession. Moore relates that when he first began to attend the school, Mr. Whyte encouraged a taste for acting among his pupils. When only about eleven years old, young Moore took part in some of the school-plays, and as he remarks, a taste for acting soon educed his talents for music and poetry. His father had chosen for him the profession of the law. In 1793, the disabilities of the Catholics, to...
