Original publisher: Aberdeen Proving Ground, MD : Army Research Laboratory, 2005 OCLC Number: (OCoLC)74284390 Subject: Computer graphics -- Equipment and supplies. Excerpt: . . . monitoring tools available in Ensight. Ensight is a commercial, multipurpose graphics package used on a variety of HPC-related applications, primarily in the area of computational structural mechanics and computational fluid dynamics. The purpose of performing these benchmarks was to give a relative performance value to existing, common workstations used by computational scientists at ARL. This is not an absolute performance value as there are many different types of graphics applications and each has unique characteristics which determine overall performance. However, we hoped to find a trend in performance which would indicate the relative value of commodity machines versus the long-used SGI workstations. The benchmark consists of running five tests from an Ensight command file and is designed to stress the systems graphics, memory and CPU. The initial geometry contains 5, 324 quads and 128, 500 triangles which are duplicated six times, giving a total number of polygons in the test of 37, 944 quads and 771, 204 triangles. The test images...
